LEADERSHIP ACCESS INSTITUTE

Leadership Access® is an experiential, professional education and coaching program offered exclusively to both established and emerging leaders. Based on the premise that academic education, while essential as a building block, is limited in its scope and format, this program goes far beyond traditional education to offer unique preparation for those who will influence the success of organizations into the next generation.

Our program teaches individuals strategic thinking and leadership skills where they will be used - in the workplace. For participants, it moves beyond technical, quantitative education, beyond the limitations of the classroom and beyond experience in a single employment setting to offer an unparalleled experiential opportunity. In the boardroom, on the shop floor or in the laboratory, this experience goes beyond description to make the lessons real and the growth permanent. In this program students learn to adapt and excel in an evolving organizational environment. This is a unique course that blends academic knowledge and hands-on techniques for successful leadership, communication, negotiation, diversity management, crisis management and team building.

LAI GRADUATE PROGRAM

- ▶ Critical Thinking Skills in Uncertain Environments
TUESDAY ■ AUGUST 20, 2019 ■ 12-4 PM
Instructors: Richard Barnes, Dennis McKinney

Richard Barnes

Dennis McKinney

On the evening of May 4, 2007, the first of a series of powerful storms and one of the strongest tornadoes of the century, a Category 5 tornado with a freakishly wide 1.7-mile-swath, and 205 miles-per-hour winds, flattened 95% of McKinney's hometown of Greensburg, Kansas.

The tornado left the area without power, plunging it into darkness. The destruction included the city hospital, schools and McKinney's own house in town. Together with his daughter, Lindy, in their basement, they barely survived the complete collapse of their residence.

McKinney immediately declared his intent to remain and rebuild. With city officials, McKinney helped guide the community in the mobilization of rebuilding efforts and resources. On May 23rd, still homeless from the storm, McKinney was in the State capitol shepherding a relief bill for Greensburg through the Legislature. It passed unanimously in both houses, transferring an additional $25 million to a pre-existing $10 million state emergency fund, and granting another $5 million in business restart grants for the community.

Join Richard Barnes and Dennis McKinney for this unique half-day program on crisis leadership and rebuilding in the face of disaster.

WORKSHOP

- ▶ The Sales Led Organization
Become the Successful, Friend Expert to Your Customers
OCTOBER 10, 2019 ■ 7:30 AM - 4 PM
Instructor: Gary Meggison, Leah Gutmann

As a general observation, mechanical contractors don't excel at selling. In my experience contractors don't put enough importance or emphasis on selling as a strategic objective to gaining and keeping business. In addition, our industry uses sales models that don't get us what we want which is long term, sustainable business. In this workshop participants learn the new model of selling and that will cause a shift in the way we see the sales role in our organization. Being able to see sales as a foundational role with wide reaching impact is critical to owning and embracing the sales process. In addition, students will leave with the ability to apply the process to their own roles and learn how to use key leadership skills in order to enhance and solidify their success. The workshop will practice not only experience the why of the sales process but the how. The group will practice specific techniques and strategies designed to increase sales success rates and understand that the goal is long-term business relationships where you grow to be their preferred contractor.
